

LA FOLLETTE IS IN MILWAUKEE

Said To Be There To Help Cochems Out In The Fight Against Stafford.

MAY TALK ON SENATORIAL MATTER

If He Does, A Landslide May Be Started--Busy Days In Campaign Headquarters--Cook and Stephenson In Oshkosh This Afternoon.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 26.—United States Senator La Follette arrived in the city this morning and is at the Republican House where a large number of friends gathered in parlor 89 this morning to greet him.

If the visit of Senator La Follette has anything to do with the senatorial contest it is being kept very quiet, as neither he nor National Committeeman A. T. Rogers, who is with him, has made as yet any public expression on that contest.

Apparently the only reason for his visit is to do material aid for Henry Cochems who is seeking to defeat Congressman Stafford. This is reported to be the reason for the trip and from the men who have been summoned to meet him it is apparent this is one reason for the visit.

That La Follette will seriously go out of the city without saying some thing relative to the senatorial fight to his close friends is expected and the next twenty-four hours may see some sudden new alignments in the ranks of the faithful.

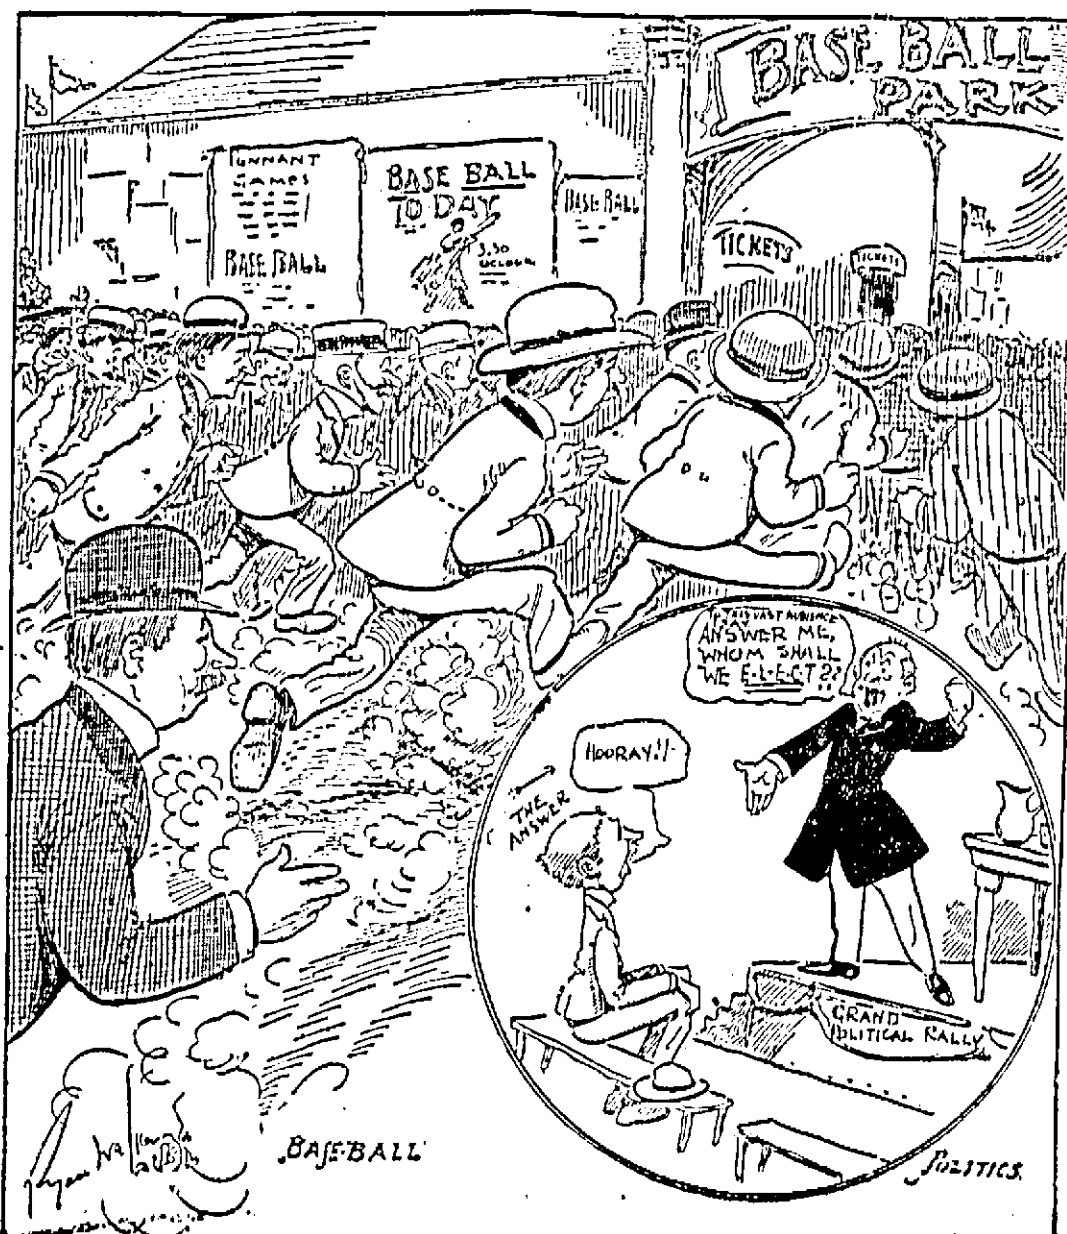

At all the senatorial headquarters the final struggle of the campaign is being fought out on the lines laid down weeks ago. Arrangements are being made for workers at the different polling places throughout the state when the vote is doubtful and an effort to get out a large vote is being made.

There are no changes in the claims made by the managers and the contest is a close one with Stephenson still in the lead throughout the state as a whole although in some localities his opponents show considerable strength.

Word comes from Oshkosh today that United States Senator Isaac Stephenson of Marinette and ex-Congressman S. A. Cook of Neenah, both of whom are candidates for United States senate, were in Oshkosh today and took part in the industrial parade of the Old Home Week celebration this morning. Mr. Cook received a large demonstration here by five hundred men from Neenah who came to this city previous to the parade and marched carrying large banners bearing the name of S. A. Cook.

Mr. Stephenson said he was not here on any political mission but came to enjoy the celebration as he was familiar with Oshkosh when it was a lumber camp. He said he was going to Racine and Kenosha from here.

We may find it hard to work up an interest in the campaign, but a good ball game certainly starts us going.

These developments arose today in the mysterious disappearance of Eddy, who has been missing since Aug. 18th, when he was last seen in the Plankinton House. # ADVERTISING MEN TO ASK AMENDMENT OF THE LAW Allowing Postmaster General To Issue Fraud Order--S. S. McClure To Speak.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 26.—"Honest Advertising" is the keynote of the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, which began in this city today. The convention will vote upon a resolution which provides an amendment to the Antichain bill, introduced last winter in congress. The bill provides penalties for any advertiser misrepresenting goods in any detail. The amendment sought would be to force every publisher in the United States who runs advertising in his periodical to publish daily on the editorial page a sworn statement of the circulation of the paper. If it is circulated through the mails.

An effort to secure a law through which the power of the Postmaster General in issuing "fraud orders" against publications may be curtailed is to be made at the convention, Del-ates from the Cincinnati Advertising Club will ask the convention to resolve "That the before-mentioned power, now reposed in the postmaster-general, should be taken from him and vested in the federal courts, and that the law conferring the power on the courts be so framed as to require that neither the use of the mails nor the second-class mail privileges shall be taken away until a hearing shall have been accorded the person affected."

Numerous prominent speakers are to be heard during the three days the convention will be in session. Among the number are Charles W. Knapp of St. Louis, Arthur Brisbane of New York, C. W. Post of Battle Creek, Truman A. Dwyer of Buffalo, R. J. Cunningham of Chicago, S. S. McClure, the magazine publisher, A. W. Lawson, third assistant postmaster general, and John W. Barrett, director of the International Bureau of American Republics.

TALK OVER PROSPECTS OF COMING FOOTBALL SEASON

University Has An Opportunity This Year of Making An Excellent Showing.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 26.—Whether the University of Wisconsin football team is strong or weak this year depends almost entirely upon whether the faculty will allow nearly a dozen players to work off conditions in class work before the season opens. Most of the players who remain from year's variety and the leading second eleven men of 1907 are under deficiencies in these shortcomings before they can even get out and practice. Some members of the university faculty oppose allowing athletes any favors and will not give special examinations to remove conditions. If it were not for this element of the situation, the prospects at Madison for a strong bidder in the western intercollegiate championship race on the gridiron this fall would be quite good. Never has there been a better lot of material in view for the places in the backfield. In any event Wisconsin will have a fast set of backs. The outlook for the line, however, is bad. The strong combination of last year, broken up by the graduation of play-

Oct. 31—Marquette university, at Madison.

November 7—Minnesota University, at Minneapolis.

November 21—University of Chicago, at Madison.

The disappointment is in the fact that on the home field there is only one game worthy of note, that with Chicago on Nov. 21. The other two scheduled home games, with Lawrence and Marquette, are small events of practice character. The students sincerely hoped that the conference authorities would allow a schedule of seven games instead of five, or would at least allow a couple of minor preliminary or practice contests with secondary school teams, and great was the disappointment when the representatives of the University of Wisconsin took a determined stand against any enlargement of the five-game schedule. However, the present schedule is a hopeful one in that the five combats are spread over a period of seven weeks, with intervals of two weeks in two places in the schedule. On the Saturday before the hard game with Minnesota, Wisconsin meets the new university of Milwaukee. Marquette, for a brush that should prove easy and not involve danger of injury for the big game a week later. Prior to the Minnesota game, always the most terrible and most feared of the Wisconsin schedule, the badgers have two weeks in which to practice without having to enter any hard game. The Chicago game will be the final event of the season and should be the climax of the western football year, particularly if Wisconsin is able to dispose of Minnesota. This Chicago game, on account of its being last on the schedule, will not necessarily be the objective of the training season. In fact, the climax of the training season will be the Minnesota game two weeks earlier than the Chicago contest. Minnesota is always to be depended upon to give the badgers a terrible game and for that event the Wisconsin coaches will brace themselves. If the badgers can go through the trial of the rougher safely, which is exceedingly doubtful, the game will be to keep the men in even condition for the two remaining weeks before the Chicago game which closes the season.

Dr. Hutchins said last night that he is investigating the standstill of players with a view to seeing what can be done for the backward fellows, and he is also corresponding with players to get a line on his material. In a few days, he said, he would be able to discuss the individual positions and players available.

Dr. Hutchins will assist and advise in coaching, as will also Dr. Charles McCarty, the state legislative reference librarian, who has for a number of years acted as a volunteer assistant coach of the university football team and who induced the regents to hire a special football coach for the coming season.

The Wisconsin football schedule this year is in some respects disappointing and in some others it is a good arrangement of contests. The completed schedule is as follows:

Oct. 10—Lawrence University, at Madison.

Oct. 17—Indiana University, at Bloomington, Ind.

Dr. Hutchins said last night that he is investigating the standstill of players with a view to seeing what can be done for the backward fellows, and he is also corresponding with players to get a line on his material. DENISON PARTY
AT PORT ARTHURVISIT SCENES OF FAMOUS CON-FLICT OF THE LATE WAR.

AMERICAN ENGINES USED

On the South Manchuria Railway and All Construction Material from This Country.

On the twenty-ninth of last month Rev. R. C. Denison and party visited Port Arthur, the scene of the great conflict of the Japanese-Russian war.
His impressions are given in the following letter:

Ryolun (Port Arthur), July 29.— There is no loss without some gain and yet when the Duple Maru broke her propeller about eight o'clock at night in the inland sea and we had to put back to Kobe and lose two days it seemed at first nothing but loss.
But there were compensations.

We started from Kobe a second time on the Amakusa Maru, a liner ship of the same company, a former Russian hospital ship, raised from Port Arthur harbor and refitted for merchant service. When we arrived at Moji at the western end of the inland sea, after a few hours in some of the most lovely sailing streets I have ever smelled, we started for Dalay.
The purser came to me and in a few minutes we were on our way. The men on board, Admiral Taidkawa of the Imperial navy, chief of staff at Port Arthur, and Mr. H. M. Mame, master inspector at the same station.
In the course of a few hours he presented me to the inspector but the admiral's acquaintance was not so easily made. After a day at sea, having seen the great man at meals and having also discovered that his stateroom was next to my own I spoke to him on the deck. We exchanged a few commonplaces and then I asked of the American fleet at San Francisco. The admiral's English, while better than my Japanese, was not conducive to conversation and all might have ended there but for the timely appearance of the purser. He interpreted for us and I had a somewhat animated conversation with the admiral on naval and war matters.
Like all Japanese he was very retired but we had a pleasant talk and then I suggested that I was going to Port Arthur and said I had been told that everything there was closed and could not be seen. The admiral said it was not so except of course the fortifications. We talked and joked for a few moments more and then the admiral said, "You give me your card.
You come to Port Arthur. I show you everything. I have a launch—take you around the harbor." The purser advised against it. After the admiral had gone he said, "This is a great thing the admiral did for you."

The next morning I handed the admiral my card and he told me to come to his house in Port Arthur and he would have the "porkhouse" ready. He asked for the names, addresses and business of the other members of the party. On the morning of July 24th we landed at Dalay, which the Japanese have renamed Dairen.

It was interesting to see the American built locomotives of the South Manchuria railroad, pulling about the yards. They typified the new era of great piles of railroad material, almost wholly from America, lay around. In the background were the old narrow-gauge engines which the Japanese brought over during the war, when they changed the gauge of the railroad as they captured it in order to prevent the Russians from sending through troop trains in case they should recover any of the lost ground. Dairen is full of the bustle of life. There are tall smoking chimneys, Chinese coolies, under Japanese engines, men putting in saws, making new streets and building buliding materials and merchandise in overloaded mule carts. After a considerable time we got out for Port Arthur. The cars of the train between Dalay and Port Arthur were built in Wilmington, Delaware. The train pulls out past the wretched mud-hovel of the Chinese, past the brick yards where hundreds of thousands of bricks for the new city are being made, past cornfields with soil of yellow and red clay, filled by the Chinese laborers. Forlorn little donkeys are pulling miniature and antique carts over the surface and one wonders why the surface should light for the control of such a country. The admiral was traveling to Port Arthur by the same train and when I spoke with him he gave me an outline program for two days' sightseeing in the vicinity.
After lunch we started for the admiral's home, but on the way, just at the gate of the navy yard, we were met by an orderly in spotless white uniform. He came up and asked, "Are you Mr. Denison?" "I have been detained by Admiral Taidkawa to show you the navy yard."

The gate of the navy yard is just opposite the palatial house where Admiral Denison was living. On the evening night when the Japanese torpedos bombs slipped past the batteries and crippled the great battleships in the harbor. His appearance speaks of the indifference and incompetent luxury of the Russian commander, so fatal to Russia in beginning of the war. The first sight inside the navy yard is the great Russian unloading ship Amur. She lies in the dry dock where the Russians sank her just before Port Arthur fell. She is a huge wreck of broken and rusted steel, with such parts in her hull as make her hopeless of repair. The gates of the dry dock were destroyed, but the dock itself is completely intact and is soon to be restored.

There were perhaps fifty vessels, large and small, in sight about the navy yard and the orderly saved his hand toward them saying, "All these sunk by the Russians just before the capture and we have them." The history of Port Arthur is in its buildings.
Many of them were built by the Chinese 15 years ago; then Russian came, dispossessed the Chinese and put up two large fine buildings only to have the Japanese take all. The orderly called a steam launch and took us out to the harbor entrance, a narrow channel 200 yards wide lying between Golden Hill and the tip of Tiger's Tail, where the Japanese commander of Lieut.
Hobson sunk a ship to block the channel, lost his life and became a national hero.

From the navy yard we went to the building which was the mess hall of the Russian officers, but has been converted by the Japanese into a museum of war relics. Curiously enough admission is somewhat difficult for strangers to secure here, but the admiral had telephoned his permission so we were welcomed with bows and smiles. The guard of this wonderfully interesting and impressive collection was a soldier in the storming army. Here is the saddle of Gen.

Stokely and the great eagle in which he kept his officers' birds, while the Japanese kept him caged in his fortress. Here are hand grenades, those terrible explosives hurled by hand down into the midst of charging regiments, and contact earth mines, square wooden boxes which were filled with dynamite, lightly covered with earth and not in the path where a charge was likely to be made. One step on the top of this box pressed down a spring, made contact for an electric current and discharged a mine which would blow a hundred men into shreds. Here, too, is a lastly improvised mine, made of a hose pole with rounds tied on with cords and ends of rope and straps, the whole studded by musket balls, which the Japanese carried when they tried to storm the casements and the ditches were piled full of dead and wounded over whom the survivors trampled and with bloodied and frozen hands strove to hold the ladder against the wall for someone to mount, until they too were shot or blown to pieces by a hand grenade.
Off in one side room were the instruments, the splints, the bandages of the surgeons and nurses, fearful apparatus for removing a terrible wound of the terrible loss. All the recent apparatus of modern warfare, balloons, helicopters, field telephones, radio-drones and a hundred other devices for expediting the work of destroying men, are on exhibition in this museum. The custodian was in one of the regiments at one of the most fiercely contested points, North Fort. He told a terrible story without any sign of emotion.

Standing over a model of North Fort he pointed out how the Japanese attacked. "At first we try here; we cut the wire entanglements and get to the casement. But they will not get; all our men killed. (His regiment lost in one day seven hundred killed.) Then we go back two miles and trench. When we get up here (indicating a point some 600 yards from the outer casement), we begin tunnel.
We run two tunnels. Russians know we tunnel; they begin countermining.
By and by they get here; near by us; then they put in dynamite and blow up. But they put in too much and it open way for us to casement.
By and by we get here, on top wall, and fight for sand bags. Russian batteries were here; only sand bag batteries. Some time we talk; Russian hear us make noise and say, 'What doing? What doing?' We say, 'Digging hole to bury you in.' And a smile of perfect fun played over his face in the midst of his terrible story.
"Sometime we reach over brandy bottle or tobacco on pole, but no man put head up lest shot. By and by we mine under wall and blow up, bury 300 Russians." And so on. At one springing of a Japanese mine too much dynamite was used and 150 Japanese soldiers, waiting to leap forward when the explosion should open way, were completely buried and every man lost. The soldier told of this incident with a grin as though it was a fine joke on his own side.

From the museum we drove to the fort itself. It stood at a crucial point and had been thoroughly equipped by the Russians. It is now a tumbled mass of broken concrete, with a few guns and mountings, too damaged to pay to remove, lying in confusion.
But the outlines of the fort are still plainly visible and reveal an immense amount of labor and money spent by the Russians. The ground before the fort is cut by tunnels and trenches and scarred by shells.

We went also to 203 metre hill, perhaps the most famous of all the defences of Port Arthur. There were no permanent fortifications made here but the Russian intrenchments were practically as they were. The ground is strewn with the debris of war; human bones lie everywhere on the slopes where the fiercest fighting was done. I picked up one shoe in which were the bones of a man's foot, from the shattered leg bones down. The foot had evidently been shot off and left unburied. 203 Metre hill looks down into Port Arthur town and harbor and having taken it the Japanese could see all that went on and could also drop shells by direct aim into the enemy's midst.

There are many pathetic things about Port Arthur. The Russian houses, many of them, stand vacant, when the war came, which were being built still standing. There has not been a brick laid since. The worst sight on Russian signs still visible on some of the walls have a melancholy look.

One is driven about the town by Chinese drivers whose pitiful drive horses, with tattered harness, draw the carriages which the Russians abandoned when they went. At the corner of the streets stand the cruel and alert Japanese guards, with keen eyes upon everything. They symbolize the new regime. The Chinese conflict still carry their heavy loads, and live in their miserable huts. They are cursed now in Japanese instead of in Russian. They have merely changed masters and I wonder if they or the country are any better off.
Personally I do not think so.

ENORMITY OF DEED
WAS SHOWN THEMEdwin Brown Taken in Custody Last Evening on Return From Wedding Trip.

On their arrival from Chicago last evening Officer Sam Brown took Edwin Brown into custody under a warrant which was read to the groom.
The entire police force then escorted Mr. and Mrs. Brown to the police station in the patrol wagon.

While preserving a grave and dignified demeanor Chief of Police Appleby showed to Mr. Brown the enormity and gravity of his offense. When the groom was properly subdued the chief gave his daughter and her husband his blessing and on opening the door to the next room a number of friends of the happy couple, who had taken in the previous proceedings, entered and proceeded to make the returned bride-couple welcome home again.

MONROE MEN ATTEND
BIG ANNIVERSARYFour Residents Who Heard Lincoln Douglas Debate Go to Springfield.

Monroe, Wis., Aug. 26.—Four residents of Monroe, who heard the Lincoln-Douglas debate at Freeport, Ill., on Aug. 27, 1858, will go to Freeport tomorrow when the great forensic contest will be reproduced at the homecoming which is on there this week.
The four Monroe men who heard the debate are Samuel B. Mack, Dr. F.
W. Myers, D. S. Young and M. P.
Main.

The buildings on the farm of Herman F. Stodolich, seven miles east of Monroe, where a battle of the debate was held, are being burned down when a blazing load of hay was unloaded into the barnyard by a frightened team of horses. The hay was accidentally set afire by two farmhands who were burning out a bees' nest. The bees stung the team and they became more scared after the load caught on fire. The horses were badly burned.

Willis Ludlow and family and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ruegger, who are touring in Europe, met by chance in Interlaken, Switzerland, when neither party knew the other was in Switzerland.

Teachers, capable of accommodating and persons, are being built at the fair grounds for the baseball crowd.
The seats will be portable and will be placed in front of the amphitheater during the fair.

A light frost touched lowlands in Green county last night, but did no injury to corn.

BIG SHORTAGE OF
THE TOBACCO CROPAnd Jobbers Have Gone East to Look Over Situation—Business Dull.

There is this year a crop shortage, Reports from the northern section indicate a crop shrinkage of about 40 per cent. The drought and cold nights were very badly felt in the northern section. One-half of the land that was planted in tobacco last year is being used this year for raising sugar beets so that the total acreage in the state will not exceed 23,000 acres. The tobacco this year is very uneven, a repetition of the crop of '01 which proved to be a crop of short, thick, heavy leaves. This is the report of a dealer who has correspondents who send in reports of the conditions prevailing throughout the state.

The tobacco business is at present very dull. Some of the representatives of the buyers are up in Vernon county looking at the tobacco up there, which in the valleys is noted for its size. The jobbers have gone East to look over the new tobacco but are not purchasing any. The production of cigars is only 60 per cent of the normal output. This is the way one of the prominent local dealers sizes up the situation in this city.

Another says that there are a few crops being purchased around here but no buying to speak of. The only tobacco that is being sold is sold below the amount it has cost to pack it.
The dry weather is shortening the length of the leaves and a rain is much needed as some of the farmers have already commenced "shedding" and the rest will begin right away. Warm weather with rain is necessary for a good crop this year. Some of the buyers are in the north in Vernon county picking up the biggest tobacco they can buy.

G. H. Russell has purchased three carloads of '07 case goods in the north.

T. E. Welsh made a shipment of tobacco to Canada yesterday. He reports a good looking business.

STATE CONFERENCE
OF THE DAUGHTERSDelegates From the Janesville Chapter of the D. A. R. Will Attend.

On his arrival from Chicago last 1st of October will be held the annual state conference of the Daughters of the American Revolution at Ft. Atkinson. The president and one delegate appointed by the regent will attend from the local chapter and the other members are invited to attend as guests but have no vote in the business proceedings. Mrs. Q. O. Sutherland, who is the regent of the local chapter, has not yet appointed the delegate but will do so on her return from her European trip.

At this meeting the state regent will be placed in nomination for the election at the national meeting in April. The other state officers will be elected at the conference at Ft. Atkinson.

The Ft. Atkinson chapter has a membership roll of 158, the second largest in the state. The Fort was chosen for the place of the conference both on account of the size of the chapter and also on account of the historic interest connected with the spot. General Atkinson occupied the place and erected Black Hawk and to commemorate this the Fort Atkinson chapter has had a large boulder bearing a suitable inscription placed to mark the site of the old fort.

ASTONISHING RESULTS.

Follow Each New Discovery of Science.
The great strides that medical science has made in the last few years is due to the germ theory. When the germ of a disease has been discovered, the doctors have not been slow in finding a drug to kill it. In a few years, it will be rare to find a bald-headed man or woman. The falling out of hair is due to a dandruff germ, and now it has been discovered how to kill this germ. The remedy used is called Newbro's Hairpicide. Its success has been so far reported. It is also a delightful hair dressing, free from oil or sticky substances. Try it and be convinced of its actual merit.
Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for Sample to the Hairpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.
Two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00.

LOOT POSTOFFICE OF $3,000

DANDITS BOLD DYNAMITE SAFE AT WAUKEGAN, ILL.

Neat Job Done by Expert Cracksmen—Chicago Police Are Put on Robbers' Trail.

Waukegan, Ill., Aug. 26.—Dynamite was exploded on the Waukegan post office and in a spectacular raid carried off everything of value the place contained. Forcing open the safe they found plunder worth $3,000 in postage stamps and cash. They sawed their way into the office through a stairway, the top of which rested on the ceiling, and dropped 12 feet to the floor. The way in which the safe had been opened mystified the postmaster, Charles G. Watrous, when he arrived. Dynamite had been used, but the locks had been turned as neatly as if the burglars knew the combination.

A fresh supply of stamps had just been received by the postmaster and the police are working on the theory that the daring robbery was committed by some one who had a knowledge of this fact.

A widespread man hunt was begun at once following the discovery of the robbery. The Chicago police and the marshals of all the north shore towns were notified. Postmaster Watrous prepared to make out a list including as nearly as possible the amount and denominations of the stolen stamps, and this was used in an effort to trace the robbers.

Owing to the number of foreigners at work in the vicinity the Waukegan postoffice does a comparatively large money-transfer business and is accustomed to keep a considerable balance on hand. The receipts from all sources average $70,000 a year.

NEW ROLLER WILL PAY FOR ITSELF

Takes the Place of Two Teams in Drawing the Plow or Street Grader.

By saving the city six dollars a day the new street roller will pay for itself in a comparatively short time.

In drawing the plow and the grader need to clean out gutters and grade streets it takes the place of four horses. As these four horses would cost the city six dollars a day, and while the roller is only used for this purpose a portion of the time, still it will not take so very long before it has paid for itself.

Under the direction of Street Commissioner Bennett, North Bluff street has been graded over, the gutters cleaned out and the street put in good condition.

AT THE PRIMARY ELECTION
TUESDAY SEPTEMBER 1, 1908

for "Uncle Ike"

Jan. 26.—Police Court.—Francis Pombro, a young man, was brought before the court charged with being intoxicated, he being found in a suspicious condition on the streets. He pleaded that it was a new experience with him, and did not therefore wish to be dealt severely with.

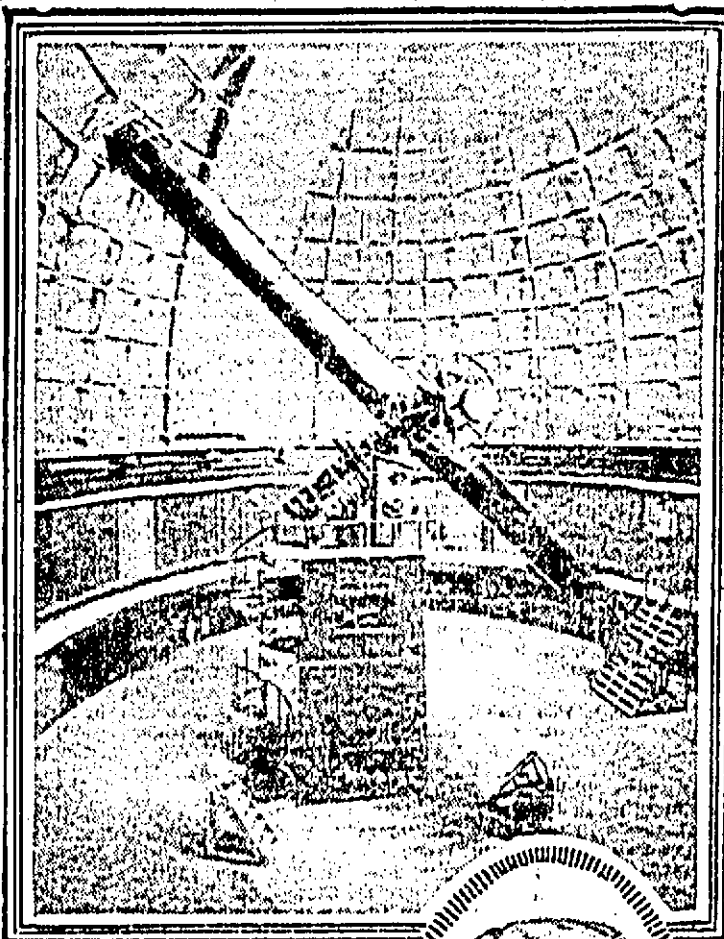

A Reformatory Institution.—A curious circumstance was to be observed in the cases that come before Justice Hudson's court for drunkenness. Nearly every culprit pleads that the offending drunk is his maiden offense in that direction, and therefore prays the justice to have him excused. If the court knows herself she will have to be tender with these erring lambs.

New York, Aug. 26.—Health authorities are making efforts to suppress and destroy the disease which has recently broken out among the cattle in the city. Every new drive which arrives is inspected and when any symptoms of the plague are visible they are promptly condemned. On Monday a drove of 18 from Missouri, were taken to the cattle yard on Madison street, near East River, when two of them were discovered to be suffering with the disease, and being unable to stand they were killed. Yesterday morning the other sixteen were alright.

Havana, Aug. 25.—The Captain General of the island has notified all consuls that passengers coming from abroad, not provided with passports by the Spanish consul, will not be allowed to land, but must return to the port from which they came, unless they own property in the island or give good guarantees for their conduct while there.

JAMES LICK AND HIS MONUMENT, THE LICK OBSERVATORY.

One hundred and eleven years ago Tuesday was born in the quiet town of Frederickburg, Pa., a man destined to go down in history as one of the world's greatest philanthropists. James Lick's life history reads more like fiction than facts. He was eccentric in the extreme, and this was brought about by a disappointment in his early love affairs. He came of a highly respected, though poor, family. Early in life he won the love of a rich miller's daughter in the neighborhood. Up to this time he had had little ambition to accomplish great things, and his life had been one of simplicity. He had sought no adventure and had little thought of the morrow. In his straightforward manner he went to the girl's father and asked his consent to the marriage. There occurred the climax of his life, which turned him from a simple country swain to a man full of determination, backed by a revengeful spirit. The wealthy farmer raved at him, and told him to make a name for himself before he dared ask the hand of his daughter.

James Lick left the home of his sweet girl's father, stung to the quick. His life's endeavor from this point on was to show that man who had so severely repudiated him that James Lick could do something worth while. He bent every effort for the balance of his life to collect sufficient funds to build the great mill which would make that of the girl's father seem insignificant in comparison. He at once shipped for South America. For years he lived on practically nothing and saved every penny. It was a hard fight, but in the course of 10 years he had saved enough to make a small investment, which proved successful and gave him his first financial start. Neither the girl nor her father again heard of James Lick for 20 years. At this time he had settled in California, and had built the mill which was the ambition of his life. Nothing in the way of risk mills had ever approached "Lick's folly." The mill was finished in mahogany. The machinery was nickel plated, and no expense was spared. When it was completed he returned to his native home, but the man whom he had spent a lifetime to revenge had passed beyond this world of earthly cares. The mill was later sold for the actual value of the woods and machinery, and brought Mr. Lick only one-tenth of his original investment.

HARRY B. RICHARDSON OF BOS-TON, PHENOMENAL AMERICAN

Mr. Lick's second eccentricity was to appear before posterity as a man of generosity rather than of small doubts. His investments in San Francisco had made him immensely wealthy by this time, and he set about to erect a monument which would appeal to the future generations. He had become interested in astronomy, and thought this field afforded the greatest opportunity for him to benefit the world. He ordered constructed the largest telescope ever built, and in a suitable structure, in the midst of the clear California atmosphere, which was especially suitable for astronomical observations, he erected the monument, which stands today to commemorate the life of James Lick. Mr. Lick died October 1, 1876, and his remains were placed in a vault at the base of the 30-foot pier supporting the great telescope.

Why Snow is White.
The reason that snow is white is that all the elementary colors are blended together in the radiance that is thrown off from the surface of the crystals, which may be examined in such a way as to detect these colors before they are mingled together to give the eye the impression of whiteness.
The whiteness of the snow is also in some degree referable to the quantity of air which is "loft" among the frozen particles. Considerably more than a thousand distinct forms of snow crystals have been enumerated. These minute crystals and prisms reflect all the compound rays of which white light consists.—Chicago Tribune.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it.

Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dizziness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. That what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary popish "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Popish is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

REPUBLICANS OF IOWA IN HARMONY

BIG CONFERENCE OF LEADERS IS HELD AT DES MOINES.

END FACTIONAL STRIFE

Gov. Cummins Announces He Will Call Special Session of the Legislature to Settle Senatorial Contest.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 26.—Nearly a thousand Republicans were in conference here Tuesday in an effort to allay the factional strife which has torn the party during the past few years, and which was believed by many to menace the success of the Republican ticket in this state.

The feature of the occasion, was Gov. Cummins' announcement that he had decided to call a special session of the legislature to dispose of the senatorial matter, which since the death of Senator Allison has threatened to renew the old fight. This special session will be asked to amend the state primary law to permit the Republican voters to select the senatorial successor at the regular election in November, instead of leaving it to a legislative caucus.

In the conference opposition was expressed to such a proceeding, but Gov. Cummins' announcement settled the matter and the decision was generally accepted in good spirit, the understanding being that the law would be so amended that only Republican voters could participate in the selection of a Republican senatorial candidate.

All Anxious for Harmony.

Many of the leaders of the party were present and most of the members of the Iowa delegation in congress.

Gov. Cummins.

Senator Doolittle was one of the speakers, declaring himself unequivocally for a harmony program. George D. Perkins, editor of the Sioux City Journal, a bitter opponent of Gov. Cummins, and Maj. John P. Lacey were also among the speakers declaring for harmony.

Late Tuesday evening Gov. Cummins issued his proclamation for the special session of the legislature to amend the state primary law, fixing Monday, August 31, as the day for convening.

Federal Place for Ellis.

Hot Springs, Va., Aug. 26.—While the announcement cannot be definitely made, Mr. Taft Tuesday gave it as his belief that Wade H. Ellis, attorney general of Ohio, will accept the position of assistant to the attorney general, to succeed Milton D. Purdy, who has been promoted to a federal judgeship in Minnesota. This opinion was expressed after a conference between Mr. Ellis and Mr. Taft here. Mr. Ellis preferred not to make a statement at this time. He came here after a conference with Attorney General Bonaparte at Lenox, Mass., and said that he had entirely recovered his health. He was offered the position shortly after the Chicago convention, and it was stated at the time that his decision in the matter would rest largely on the condition of his health.

Good News from Northwest.

Senator J. J. McCumber, of North Dakota and James Kennedy, Republican national committeeman from that state, were unannounced visitors. Mr. Taft was made to know that North Dakota wanted to be included in any speech-making itinerary that might be arranged for him. Speaking for his own state, as well as Minnesota, Montana and South Dakota, Mr. McCumber gave it as his prediction that very little, if any, change would be found in the electoral vote, it had been demonstrated, he said, that state issues and local differences in the party on their account had little if any effect on the national situation.

New Yorker a Suicide in Chicago.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—Joseph M. Krewer of 502 West One Hundred and Twenty-first street, New York, believed by the police to have been wealthy, committed suicide Tuesday evening in his room at the Grand Pacific hotel. That death might be doubly sure Krewer swallowed a quantity of carbolic acid, chloroform, and rat poison, and then severed the arteries of his wrists.

Jane Cable

... By ...
GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON, Author of "Society of Graceland," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY BODD, MEAD & COMPANY

"It may interest you to know that I had a long talk with Mr. Clegg this afternoon. He says there is a movement on foot to secure a pardon for father. Father hasn't asked any one to intercede. It is known that he will go to England as soon as he is released. That's an inducement, you see," he said bitterly.

Droom's face turned a frozen white. His steady eyes took on a peculiar glaze, and his hand grasped his leg as if it were a vice intended to hold him in his chair.

"I haven't told you about it, Jane," went on Graydon. "Mr. Clegg has seen father, and he says he is indifferent about it. He intends to leave the country in any event. I am going to write to him tonight, asking him to let them apply for a pardon. It may save him from three years more of servitude. Mr. Clegg is sure he can get his release. What's the matter, Elias?"

The old clerk's body had stiffened, and the look on his face was something horrible to behold. Terror was visible in every lineament. His companions started from their chairs in alarm. With a mighty effort the old man succeeded in regaining a semblance of self control. His body relaxed, and his jaw dropped. His voice was trembling and weak as he responded, an apologetic grin on his face.

"Nothing—nothing at all. A momentary pain. Don't mind me. Don't mind me," he intimated. "I have them often. I think it's my heart. What were you saying, Graydon? Oh, yes, the pardon. I—I hope you'll mention me in writing to your father. Tell him I hope to see him if he comes to New York."

"I don't believe he likes you, Elias," said Graydon, half jestingly.

"What has he said to you?" demanded Droom sharply.

"He rather resented our taking Jane and me to Joliet that day." The old man's grin was malicious. "He won't forgive you that."

"I shall never forget how he looked at you, Mr. Droom," said Jane, with a shudder. Droom trembled with a new spasm of fear.

Attention was diverted by the arrival of the party of six. The men were distinguished in appearance, the women aristocratic, but spirited. That they were well known to many of the diners in those days at Elmer's was at once apparent. They were bowing right and left to nearby acquaintances. After much ado they finally relapsed into the chairs conspicuously drawn back for them, and the buzz of conversation throughout the place was resumed.

Graydon, lowering his voice, named the newcomers to Jane, who looked at them with fresh interest. The names were well known to New York and European society. For the moment Elias Droom was unnoticed. He took the opportunity to collect his nerves and to subdue his too apparent emotion. Jane was recalled from her polite scrutiny of the women at the next table to hearing her name mentioned in Droom's hoarsest voice, modified into something like a whisper.

"Miss Cable, I not only asked you to come here in order to tell you the name of your father, but to point him out to you."

There was an instant of breathless silence at the table. So startling was Jane's announcement that every other sound in the room escaped the ears of his two listeners.

"There was a new hundred dollar bill found in the basket with you. Your grandfather's signature was on that bill. He was the president of the bank which issued it. Your mother whispered a name that fairly scared his hearers. Graydon caught his breath, and a new light appeared in his eyes. He was beginning to suspect that the old man's brain was clear, and Jane leaned forward to him.

"Don't fret, Elias," began Graydon, somewhat roughly. "It is the truth; I swear it," assured Elias.

"But, great heaven, man, consider what you've said! It's one of the best families in this country. It's preposterous to say—"

"Of course her family is one of the best," she was a bluestocking. That's what Miss Cable gets out of her word blood."

"Elias, I can't believe it!" cried Graydon.

Jane was staring blankly at the old man's face.

"Your father will tell you the same. For more than twenty years I have known the secret. There's no documentary proof, but this much I do know—James Droomer received $50,000 for keeping his mouth closed. He found out the truth, and it profited by it, as usual. Oh, he knew that hundred dollar bills are not let with pauper babies. I don't know how he unearthed the truth about me."

"Oh! Don't mention the time aloud!" "But he did untruthfully say your father, Miss Cable, is sitting at this table. Don't look up just yet. He is staring at you. He doesn't know you, but he does know you as a pretty woman. The gentleman on the gray hair, Graydon. See? That man is her father."

Graydon half started up, his chair, his lips apart, his eyes fixed on the man designated. Every drop of blood seemed to have frozen in his veins.

"Good God, Elias!" he whispered. "Why, that is—"

The son of the man who signed the bank note. He is Jane's father. There's little blood in him—there has been since King Henry's day—but he is a villain for all that. Now, Miss Cable, I've done my duty. I've told you the absolute truth. You could not have expected more. You could not have asked a greater climax. The name of Vanderbilt or Astor is no better known than that man's name, and no ancestry is better than that of your mother. I will now give you one of the articles of proof that connects you with that history." He handed to her a small package. "It is the letter written to James Droomer by your paternal grandfather, agreeing to an appointment to discuss a question of grave moment. I found the letter that same day, and I've kept it all these years. It bears your grandfather's signature. That is all. I heard part of that interview, and I take my soul that what I've told you is true."

Jane sat looking at him as if paralyzed. Her mind was quite incapable of grasping the full import of his words—the words she had craved for so many months and yet dreaded.

"Your father—Miss Cable, is sitting at that table."

"I knew he was coming here tonight. He gives a theater party. Tomorrow he goes abroad. That is all."

"He's flying in Paris," muttered Graydon mechanically. Jane spoke for the first time, as in a daze.

"I—I have seen him many times in Paris. My father? Oh, oh, it can't be true!"

"Jane, let me take you away from here," began Graydon, observing her pallor.

"Not let me stay. It can't matter. Graydon, I want to look at him again and again," she said shrinking back as if the whole world were staring at her. By the most prodigious effort she regained control of her fleeing composure. It was a trying moment.

"He's worth millions," said Droom. "I will be worth while for you to—"

"Oh," she exclaimed passionately. "You think I will present myself to him? For he has cast me off? No—a hundred times, no!"

At that instant the party of six hurriedly arose to leave the place. The old man with the gray hair—the handsome man of all—was staring boldly at Jane's averted face, now red with consciousness. As he passed her in silence out of the room his look grew more intent. She glanced up, and a smile crossed his face.

"Come girl," he remarked to her behind him, and then he looked at her right, perhaps forever.

"The woman who," cried Jane, her eyes following the awful creature at his side—"is she—"

"No," said Graydon, averting his eyes to avoid her expression; "his wife."

Droom waited until the party was out of the restaurant before uttering a word.

"I made of two years I have pointed out two fathers to their children—yours and his, Jane. Your mother's are dead. There isn't much choice as to fathers. If I were you, I'd say I had the better of the bargain. Take an old man's advice, both of you, and let bygones be bygones. Start life now, just as if nothing had happened before, and get every atom of happiness out of it that you can. Don't you two pay for the sins of your fathers."

"I couldn't live in New York if he were living here," murmured Jane.

"Fie, waiter, your bill," said Droom, with sudden harshness.

It was snowing and the wind was blowing a gale when they emerged from the place. Jane hung heavily upon Graydon's arm. He could feel that she was sobbing. He did not dare to look into her face, but he felt something cruelly triumphant surging in his heart. Elias Droom waited until their cab came up. Then he offered, his hand to both hesitatingly, even timidly.

"Good night. Be happy. There is nothing else left for you but that. Graydon, when you write to your father give him my love."

Sad, But True.

A precocious son of five years looked very philosophically at his mother one day and remarked: "Isn't it wonderful how one's skin is put on? Is it sewed together or pasted with glue?"

Realizing the folly of any physiological explanations she replied: "No, dear, it is all in one piece."

Still a quizzical expression spread his face. Peering at his mother's forehead, he asked his finger and exclaimed: "Well, mother, I really think you have a seam across there."

After the humor of the remark had passed it awakened a note of pathos, for that mother, with the aid of the mirror, discovered that the hitherto unobserved seam was there, her first

PRICE OF SOLVAY ADVANCES SEPT. 1ST

The price of SOLVAY advances September 1st $7.50 per ton for the reason that we have to pay 50 cents per ton additional for all that we receive from the makers after that date.

WHY NO ORDER TODAY?

We have in our files more orders for Solvay than at any previous time, although we have sold hundreds of tons of this good fuel. If you do not want to use it entirely, try a few tons.

SPECIAL NOTICE!

Our success in selling Solvay has as usual brought on a fellow with his just as good, but look out for him! always remembering that the tree bearing the best fruit has always the most leaves! One party is actually taking orders for Solvay that never possessed a pound, but is doing so at the expense of his reputation for truth and fair dealing.

We are sole distributors for Solvay in Janesville.
PLEASE REMEMBER THAT.

SOLVAY saves 20 per cent of your coal bill.

SOLVAY saves labor.

SOLVAY has no dust nor dirt.

SOLVAY burns bright and clean.

SOLVAY is one-half cheaper than wood.

SOLVAY goes as far as hard coal.

SOLVAY burns only in a stove with a grate.
